

SCIATICA

Home Exercises

Sciatica is a specific type of low back pain; it refers to altered sensation that normally radiates from the low back into the buttocks, hip, and then down the leg into the foot. This can occur in either or both lower extremities. Symptoms usually include pain, numbness, burning and/ or tingling. Sciatica is often a result of injury to a muscle, ligament, bulging/ ruptured disk, or arthritis.

While treating sciatica, one should work on:

- Avoiding positions/ activities that exacerbate pain
- Maintaining proper posture
- Using proper lifting techniques
- Avoiding prolonged sitting or standing
- Performing exercises that increase sciatic nerve and hamstring length
- Performing exercises to increase core strength and add stability to spine

As with all exercises, some soreness is expected. The exercises attached are general guidelines and not meant to be an exhaustive list. Please use your best judgment when starting a home exercise program. If you experience increased pain that continues without any decrease in symptoms, please contact your MD or PT for guidance.
